

In the Midst of Time

When the roll of the hill meets its end,
I see that our planet has its
moment in time.

We still inspire contemplation
as well as recognize that cognitive thinking
is where it all is.

The imbalance of our time-
our world is confronting tensions
of another nature; unemployment,
economic problems, social tornadoes
and yes, flawed experiences

America, lift up your chin.
Come together with a hidden policy
not written down but active.
We are not under-groundlings.
The human situation is a kind of truth
of sorrow and celebration.

We are whole like the sweet watermelon,
seeds yes, but alternatives of future planting-
creating the moisture of success.
We must take cues from creative individuals.
Long term thinking is on the human ballot,
don't be shy, this is our movement.
Take it with the guidance of strength we all have.
